Death Then Nothing

16 years after extraordinary "Invisible Circle" the legend of death metal is back with vengeance

The beginnings of Armagedon date back to late 1986. Krizz and Slavo supported by other musicians set up the group, which would reflect their then ambition: to be metal messengers!!! The world in the year 1986 was entirely different to what we know now. It took a lot of strength, determination and confidence to set up a band and keep it going. The first two years of its activity were mainly hard work at rehearsals, gigs given from time to time and a rising interest of local fans, who persuaded the band in 1988 to record their first demo called "Armagedon". The years 1990 and 1991 marked a breakthrough for the group. Armagedon matured musically. Its line-up became stable, and thus it came to be a top Polish metal band. Uncompromising music combined with energetic shows were an enormous power for Armagedon. "Dead Condemnation", 1991, was the first demo the band recorded in a professional studio. The first official record, "The Invisible Circle", recorded by Armagedon in the Modern Sound Studio, came out under the Carnage Records label in 1993. This was another milestone in band's progress. Many independent reviewers recognized this as one of the best death-metal releases at the time. It is notable that in the 1993 rankings of all the magazines then published in PL, "The Invisible Circle" and Armagedon itself always occupied top positions. International success seemed close. However in 1994 the band disbanded. Over a decade later Armagedon brothers decided to revive the band, just as a long time ago, at the very beginning. It was 2006. Shortly afterwards, Sooloo (bass), who played in the band since 1990, joined them. Joint rehearsals, massive enthusiasm and motivation. No burdens or obligations, just one message: glory to Armagedon and its fans! Their new release, "Death Then Nothing", was recorded in studio x in Olsztyn in August and October 2008. The band signed a contract with Mystic Production and the record was launched in February 2009. This is a very special record, it comes after so many years of absence, and yet it is both mature and contains a simple message. The powerful, succulent and selective sound, bursting voice and an uncompromising attitude to composition combine to make a very interesting whole. This great comeback of the band is likely to be the most powerful death metal records!
